

Mr. Wada used to work as civil engineer on river management in Japan and developing countries in Asia for about 10 years. Currently, he has been in charge of the secretariat of the Japan River Restoration Network (JRRN), one of the local networks of the Asian River Restoration Network (ARRN), as a program coordinator for capacity building and exchanging knowledge/technical information on river restoration focusing on the partnership in Japan and Asian countries since 2007.